What is a bibliography?

A bibliography is a list of citations to publications including abstracts, annotations, or other material about the publications. Bibliographies are formatted according to specific patterns and citation styles.

There are several types of bibliographies including subject, serial, annotated, retrospective, and current bibliographies. Each serves a different purpose.

CALiO™ Bibliographies

CALiO™ bibliographies are subject bibliographies. Publications listed within the bibliographies focus upon a specific subject. Unless otherwise stated, publications are listed in date descending order. Scope notes are provided at the beginning of each bibliography to provide understanding of the coverage and arrangement. Whenever possible, links to open access publications are provided in CALiO™ bibliographies.

How to use a bibliography

Locate a bibliography on the subject you wish to research. Read through the abstracts and note the citations for publications you would like to obtain. To access articles and other types of publications, log in to CALiO using your CAC username and password. If you are not eligible for access, contact the NCAC Digital Information Librarian at library@nationalcac.org. Eligibility requirements are provided here.
